

Amy Abernethy, Flatiron Health

Chief Medical Officer, Chief Scientific Officer & Senior Vice President, Oncology

Amy Abernethy serves as chief medical officer, chief scientific officer and senior vice president, oncology, where she leads the research oncology, clinical operations and data science teams, and contributes to the strategic vision of Flatiron Health. Before joining Flatiron, Amy was professor of medicine at Duke University School of Medicine, and ran the Center for Learning Health Care in the Duke Clinical Research Institute and Duke Cancer Care Research Program in the Duke Cancer Institute. For more than a decade, she has pioneered the development of technology platforms to spur novel advancements in cancer care, including the development of systems by which big data can support personalized medicine, outcomes research, cancer care quality monitoring, and scientific discovery. With over 400 peer-reviewed publications, Amy is an internationally recognized expert in clinical trials, cancer outcomes research, health policy, health services research, patient reported outcomes, clinical informatics and patient-centered care. Amy received her MD from Duke University, where she also did her internal medicine residency, served as chief resident and completed her hematology/oncology fellowship. She has her PhD from Flinders University in Australia, focused on evidence-based medicine and clinical informatics, and her Bachelor's degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Alice Borrelli, Intel Corporation

Global Director of Healthcare Policy

Alice Borrelli, Global Director of Healthcare Policy, worked for Intel for ten years. During this time she advocated before U.S. and international policymakers on healthcare reform and Health IT issues in developed and emerging economies. During the US healthcare reform debate, she focused on reforms that would include innovative technologies for care delivery including e-Care, remote patient monitoring and telehealth. She also interfaced with government agencies worldwide to promote the adoption of viable electronic health records and the acceleration of genomic sequencing into clinical practice. She was recognized by the American Telemedicine Association with the Industry Council Award and is a recipient of the Continua Health Alliance's Key Contributor Award. Additionally, Alice has participated as a speaker in international symposia including the APEC High-Level Meeting on Health & the Economy in St. Petersburg, the Senior Officers Meeting during the International Federation on Aging Summit in Prague and as the invited guest of the World Bank and MOH to China's policy leaders from the central and provincial governments in Health IT. As former VP of Congressional Affairs for AT&T, she represented the company on telecommunications, environment, benefits and labor issues. For over a decade she interacted with Congress on the Telecommunications Act of 1996, broadband issues, Medicare and pension reform, and internet tax initiatives during her career with AT&T. Alice has also served as a public affairs consultant for enterprises including BGH&T, a private equity firm focused on health and technology solutions, the World Bank, the American Red Cross and the Cyber Security Industry Alliance. Among other association and non-profit positions, Alice was past Chairman of the Women's Congressional Policy, Inc, supporting the women's congressional delegation, Public Policy Chair for the Global Coalition on Aging and on the Board of Advisors for the College of William and Mary's Thomas Jefferson Program for Public Policy. She has a BA in Government from the College of William and Mary and an MPA from New York University.

Stanley Crosley, Indiana University CLEAR

Co-Director

Stanley W. Crosley is the Co-Director of the Indiana University Center for Law, Ethics, and Applied Research in Health Information (CLEAR); Counsel to the law firm of Drinker Biddle & Reath in Washington, DC; and Principal of Crosley Law Offices, LLC. Stan is a Senior Strategist at the Information Accountability Foundation, is an Adjunct Professor of Law at Maurer School of Law, Indiana University, and serves as Co-Chair of the federal Privacy and Security Workgroup for Health and Human Services Office of the National Coordinator for Health Information Technology (HHS/ONCHIT), providing guidance on health privacy and data security to HHS and the White House. Stan also serves on the board of The Privacy Projects, and as the Co-Chair of the Research Committee for C-Change. Stan is the former Chief Privacy Officer for Eli Lilly and Company and is a former board member of the International Association of Privacy Professionals (IAPP), the International Pharmaceutical Privacy Consortium, the Indiana Health Informatics Technology, Inc., served on the IOM HIPAA and Research Workgroup that delivered the first report on the research implications of HIPAA and the Brookings Institute workgroup providing guidance on the FDA's Sentinel project. In his global legal practice, and in his activity as a speaker, Stan provides guidance on topics ranging from the full spectrum of health data issues, applied and innovative technology, and privacy to data strategy and applied data ethics, working with multinational companies and start-ups in the technology, biopharma, medical device, biotech, communications, social media, and health provider industries, as well as with data protection and health regulators and policy makers in the US, EU, Asia, and around the world.

Jolynn Dellinger, Triangle Privacy Research Hub (TPRH)

Board Member

Jolynn Dellinger is a Board Member of the Triangle Privacy Research Hub (TPRH). Jolynn served as the founding Program Manager for Data Privacy Day. She turned Data Privacy Day into a globally recognized event to raise awareness for privacy, with a specific focus on recognizing globally shared privacy interests and mechanisms for dialogue and collaboration. She has worked as a privacy lawyer at Intel Corporation, at The Privacy Projects and at the National Cyber Security Alliance. She is currently a member of the Data Privacy Day Advisory Committee. She also serves on the Board of Directors for Book Harvest. Prior to working for Intel, Jolynn worked as a staff attorney for Judge W. Earl Britt in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina (1998-2007), as a Fellow in the Solicitor General's Office in the U.S. Department of Justice (1994-95), and as a clerk for Judge Francis D. Murnaghan, Jr. in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit (1993-94). She has also practiced at law firms in Washington, D.C. and North Carolina, taught Family Law at Duke Law School and Legal Writing at UNC School of Law. Jolynn received her BA in English from Columbia University. Jolynn also received a masters in Humanities (with a concentration in Women's Studies) and a law degree from Duke University, where she graduated Order of the Coif and was an Editor on the Duke Law Journal.

Kimberly Gray, QuintilesIMS

Attorney & Global Chief Privacy Officer

Kimberly Gray is an attorney and is the global chief privacy officer of QuintilesIMS. She is responsible for the company's privacy and data protection strategy. Kimberly serves on the Executive Council of HITRUST, the Advisory Board of the Future of Privacy Forum, the governing board of the Philadelphia CISO Association, the Centre for Information Policy Leadership (CIPL), the Ethics Committee of the European Pharmaceutical Market Research Association (EphMRA), and the Confidentiality Coalition of the Healthcare Leadership Council. She has served on the Board of Directors of the International Association of Privacy Professionals (IAPP). Gray earned a Juris Doctor degree from The Dickinson School of Law. She has taught as an adjunct professor at law school and master's program levels, and she lectures frequently on privacy and data protection issues.

Michelle De Mooy, Center for Democracy and Technology

Director of the Privacy & Data Project

Michelle De Mooy is Director of the Privacy & Data Project at the Center for Democracy & Technology. She advocates for data privacy rights and protections in legislation and regulation, works closely with industry and other stakeholders to advance good data practices and controls, and researches emerging technology and the evolving boundaries of personal privacy. She leads CDT's health privacy work, chairing the Health Privacy Working Group and focusing on the intersection between individual privacy, health information and technology. Michelle's current research is focused on ethics and algorithms in commercial health. She has testified before Congress and the Federal Trade Commission, provided commentary for publications like the New York Times, Vice, and the Guardian, and appeared on TV programs such as The Today Show, Voice of America, and Government Matters. Before CDT, Michelle worked as a political campaign consultant for M+R Strategic Services, as a development and communications director at a capacity building organization aimed at nonprofits, and in the tech sector in product management and software engineering.

Barak Richman, Duke University School of Law

Edgar P. and Elizabeth C. Bartleet Professor of Law & Professor of Business Administration

Barak Richman is Edgar P. and Elizabeth C. Bartleet Professor of Law and Professor of Business Administration at Duke University. His work has been published in the Columbia Law Review, the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, Law and Social Inquiry, the New England Journal of Medicine, the Journal of the American Medical Association, and Health Affairs. In 2006, he co-edited with Clark Havighurst a symposium volume of Law and Contemporary Problems entitled "Who Pays? Who Benefits? Distributional Issues in Health Care," and his book Stateless Commerce was published by Harvard University Press in 2017. Barak represented the NFL Coaches Association in an amicus curiae brief in American Needle v. The Nat'l Football League, which was argued before the U.S. Supreme Court in January 2010 and again in Brady v. The Nat'l Football League in 2011. Richman also is on the Health Sector Management faculty at Duke's Fuqua School of Business and is a Senior Fellow at the Kenan Institute for Ethics. He won Duke Law School's Blueprint Award in 2005 and was named Teacher of the Year in 2010. Barak has an AB, magna cum laude, from Brown University, a JD, magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School, and a PhD from the University of California, Berkeley, where he studied under Nobel Laureate in Economics Oliver Williamson. He served as a law clerk to Judge Bruce M. Selya of the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, and from 1994-1996 he handled international trade legislation as a staff member of the United States Senate Committee on Finance, then chaired by Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

Richard Saver, UNC School of Law

Arch T. Allen Distinguished Professor

Professor Richard Saver is Arch T. Allen Distinguished Professor of Law at UNC School of Law; professor (secondary appointment) in the Department of Social Medicine, School of Medicine; and adjunct professor of health policy and management in the School of Public Health. He previously served as Associate Professor of Law and Co-Director of the Health Law and Policy Institute at the University of Houston Law Center. The Order of the Barons honored him as Professor of the Year in 2003-04. Following law school, Richard clerked for Judge Eugene Wright on the United States Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit. Professor Saver also practiced in the health law department of McDermott, Will, & Emery in Washington, D.C. and served as Associate General Counsel for the University of Chicago Hospitals and Health System. He joined the UNC faculty after serving as Visiting Associate Professor of Law at UNC in the spring of 2009. His research interests include health law, nonprofit organizations, and torts. He has published articles in law reviews, medical journals, and other interdisciplinary publications. His co-authored book, Health Law and Bioethics: Cases in Context was published by Aspen Publishers. Richard received the UNC School of Law's Chadbourn Award for Excellence in Scholarship (2012) for his law review article on health care reform and comparative effectiveness research. In addition, he received the UNC School of Law's Robert G. Byrd Award (2015-2016) for Excellence and Creativity in Teaching. Richard received his BA summa cum laude from Harvard University in History and Science (Biology) and his JD with distinction from Stanford Law School. He was a member of the Stanford Law Review.

Kevin Schulman, Duke University School of Medicine

Professor of Medicine

Kevin A. Schulman, MD, MBA serves as a professor of medicine at Duke University. At Duke, he is a faculty associate director of the Duke Clinical Research Institute at the School of Medicine, at 1200 people the country's largest academic clinical research organization. His other university affiliations include the Trent Center for Bioethics, Humanities and History of Medicine; the Duke Translational Research Institute; and served on the Executive Committee of the Duke Global Health Institute. At Duke's Fuqua School of Business, he oversaw the growth of what has become the country's largest health sector management program at any top business school. He served as the Gregory Mario and Jeremy Mario Professor of Business Administration, director of the Health Sector Management Program (HSM), and the Center for the Study of Health Management for over a dozen years. He is the Founding Director of the unique Master of Management in Clinical Informatics program (MMCi). He has served as a Visiting Professor in General Management at Harvard Business School from 2013-2016, and is currently a visiting scholar at the School. This appointment serves as a part of the HBS Health Care Initiative. At HBS, he has co-taught Innovating in Health Care with professor Regina Herzlinger 2013-2015, and wrote and taught Innovating in Biomedical Technology in 2014. Kevin is a distinguished researcher who has published over 400 papers, book chapters, and business case studies. His work includes major papers on clinical economics, health disparities, and health policy and innovation. His peer-reviewed articles have appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine, JAMA, and Annals of Internal Medicine. He is a member of the editorial/advisory boards of the American Heart Journal, Health Policy, Management and Innovation (www.HMPI.Org), and Senior Associate Editor of Health Services Research.

Ari Schwartz, Venable

Managing Director of Cybersecurity Services.

Ari Schwartz is Venable's Managing Director of Cybersecurity Services. He directs the firm's cybersecurity consulting services, assisting organizations with understanding and developing risk management strategies, including implementation of the Cybersecurity Framework and other planning tools to help minimize risk. Previously, Mr. Schwartz served at the White House National Security Council, as Special Assistant to the President and Senior Director for Cybersecurity where he led legislative and policy outreach to businesses, trade groups and others. Before his work at the White House, Schwartz led the Department of Commerce's Internet Policy Task Force, worked at the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and served for twelve years at the Center for Democracy and Technology.

Michael "Buz" Waitzkin, Duke University Science & Society Initiative

Deputy Director

Michael "Buz" Waitzkin is the Deputy Director of Science & Society and Senior Lecturing Fellow at Duke University. For the past fifteen years, he has taught at Duke and been a frequent lecturer at other universities on issues of science law, policy, ethics and politics, with a focus on developing biomedical technologies. He is the co-founder and chief strategy officer of Genomeon LLC, a start-up company developing and commercializing a genomic diagnostic technology, based on what others have discarded as "junk DNA." He practiced law in the District of Columbia for 35 years, where he handled complex commercial and criminal cases in federal and state trial and appellate courts throughout the country. He has extensive experience in advising the biomedical research community on issues relating to legal and regulatory strategy and ethics. He served as Special Counsel to the President in the White House Counsel's Office. He attended the University of Virginia (BA 1971; Phi Beta Kappa, Echols Scholar), Stanford Law School (JD 1974) and Yale Law School (LLM 1975, Commonwealth Fellow in Law, Science and Medicine).